

NEWS

No. of Scouts: 5

Equipment: 5 chairs

Four scouts are sitting on chairs and they speak in radio voices.

Scout One (turning on radio and pressing an imaginary button to change channels / scout each time): Let's see if there is anything interesting on the radio.

Scout Two: "Here is the news. The Chief Scout went to Buckingham Palace today. He said of his visit..."

Scout Three: "I've seen pigs in more sanitary conditions than this. How can you hope to operate..."

Scout Four: "...in the toilet on an aeroplane where the light didn't work and there was no water. Had I been desperate..."

Scout Five: "...I would have accepted an OBE for my services to charity but I was too busy and..."

Scout Two: "...even if the scout leader had given permission to eat the wild mushrooms it would not seem to have been..."

Scout Three: "...top of my list of things to do whilst swimming the Channel in winter..."

Scout Four: "...wearing a suit of armour and fighting the French at..."

Scout Five: "...MacDonalds where there is a two for one deal on..."

Scout Two: "...assault rifles and tanks, especially for use in..."

Scout Three: "...scout campsites where discipline can sometimes be a problem especially..."

Scout Four: "...when customers are leaving the pub which is full of..."

Scout Five: "...priests, children and chickens. This is the end of the news."

Scout One (turning radio off): Not much interesting on the radio today.
