

FRIARS

No. of Scouts: 2

Scout One is stirring a big pot.

Scout Two: What's for lunch today?

Scout One: We have missionaries.

Scout Two: Yummy. I love missionaries. So soft and tender!

Scout One: The only problem is they're not. They're still as hard as old nails. I've tried grilling them, then I roasted them. I put them on the barbecue and I've had them in all sorts of marinade to no avail. I've been stewing them for hours but they're still really tough.

Scout Two: That's odd. Where did you get them from?

Scout One: The supermarket. But I went to the posh one not the discount store. All I then did was fillet and debone them. I don't understand it.

Scout Two: What did they look like before you started preparing them?

Scout One: They had large brown cassocks with rope around their waists and a shiny ring on their bald heads.

Scout Two: Oh, I know what the problem is! They're not boilers or roasters; they're fryers!
